

Mills Oakley Canberra reaches 50 staff

7 November 2017

National law firm Mills Oakley has reached a new milestone in Canberra, making hires which take the office to over 50 staff for the first time since its 2014 launch.

Property partner Ben Gulan commenced at Mills Oakley from McInnes Wilson yesterday (6 November), bringing a team of five with him.

Ben has expertise in property and residential/mixed use developments, land subdivisions, community title schemes and commercial and industrial property. He has undertaken legal work relating to some of the largest developments in the ACT, including joint ventures with the ACT Government. Ben's clients include major ACT property developers, builders, the ACT Government and several major Australian banks.

Sharing many common clients with the existing Mills Oakley Canberra team, Ben will work closely with property partner Adam Peppinck to service clients in both the government and private sectors.

Mills Oakley CEO John Nerurker said the addition of Ben and his team would enhance the firm's capacity to service large private sector residential developments.

Mr Nerurker also flagged further growth for MO in the national capital.

"Reaching 50 staff is a notable milestone for our Canberra office but even more enhancements are planned and we look forward to making other announcements in coming weeks," he said.
