

Mills Oakley introduces new front-end insurance offering

September 2017: Top 10 national law firm Mills Oakley has added a new dimension to its insurance practice with the hire of partner Louise Cantrill from Henry Davis York in Sydney.

Louise specialises in professional negligence and corporate liability, including D&O-related matters. Her practice is a mix of traditional insurance litigation and front-end work, providing advice to clients on risk mitigation and insurance for projects and transactions, as well as ongoing general business requirements.

Mills Oakley CEO John Nerurker said the appointment was the latest enhancement to the national insurance team, which had already welcomed new partners in Perth, Brisbane and Melbourne over the past 18 months.

“What is so valuable about this appointment is that Louise will apply her deep insurance expertise to transactions, projects and other front-end activities undertaken by our clients,” he said. “Louise’s appointment will be a catalyst for further collaboration across our practice groups, to deliver strong outcomes for our clients.”

Louise works with insurers, government departments and agencies and corporates. She has a particular interest in the Health sector, having been the lead advisor in HDY’s medical malpractice team. She will be working closely with Mills Oakley’s Health & Life Sciences team, led by partner Teresa Nicoletti, to service this market at MO.

Louise’s work includes policy interpretation and multi-million-dollar insurance program reviews, multi-contract transactional advice, multi-disciplinary risk management, insolvency, and directors’ liability.

Louise will commence with Mills Oakley on October 9.
