

Mills Oakley invests in new Sydney premises

13 December 2018

The Sydney office of national law firm Mills Oakley will commence 2019 in brand new premises, relocating to the newly built “Barrack Place” tower at 151 Clarence St. Mills Oakley will be taking up five floors of Barrack Place, a 40% increase in floor space over the firm’s current premises.

Mills Oakley CEO John Nerurker said that the move was timely given the growth trajectory of the Sydney office: “Twelve years ago, we opened Sydney with a launch staff of four people,” he observed. “Since then, the office has grown to nearly 250 partners and staff and is now our largest office nationally. We are continuing to experience double-digit growth in Sydney and this investment in new premises will mean that our clients and people will enjoy a more spacious, state-of-the-art experience.”

In line with staff feedback, the firm will continue to provide offices for lawyers. “A modern office needs to facilitate both collaboration and individual work, a balance we have struck with break-out areas and traditional office spaces,” said Mr Nerurker. Barrack Place has been developed and is owned and managed by Investa, a long term Mills

Oakley client. Another MO client, Arup, is also a tenant at Barrack Place. Mills Oakley will be open for business at the new Sydney premises from January 7, 2019. All other contact details for the Sydney office will remain unchanged.
